

• Sharon Navra First Birthday Bash

Wentworth Courier - April 4, 2007

whisper@fpc.com.au

PSSST! PSSST!
PSSST!

WHISPER

Life just a walk in the park

What a difference a week makes for the premier and his wife Santina. Last Sunday, it was post-election frenzy, this Sunday a quiet stroll around The Entertainment Quarter: no minders, no media (except a chance encounter with Whisper), no fuss. Mr Lemma revealed he intended to see Tobby, the film that provides a new angle on the assassination of Robert Kennedy.

TAXEN TROUBLE FROM EARTH HOUR

One Bondi mother is regretting her decision to turn off the lights at home for Earth Hour on Saturday night. Having insisted on the blackout, she woke on Sunday morning to discover her son had dressed by candlelight, which seemed fine until she discovered that candle wax had dripped all over the carpet. Using the logic common to all children, the responsibility for the mess is all hers, because he had wanted to keep the lights on.

UNITED WE STAND?

The party is at Sydney Town Hall and no-one knows this more than Marrickville councillor Dimitrios Thanos. Cr Thanos recently asked his council staff to look into a possible amalgamation with the City of Sharon Navra shows off the Hummerzine at Instyle Indulgence's birthday bash.

Sydney Council. "The City of Sydney has a large annual surplus that approaches in size that of Marrickville Council's entire budget," Cr Thanos said. "It follows that there would be a large benefit to the residents of Marrickville in terms of service provision." While Town Hall seemed flattered and mildly amused by his suggestion, not one of Cr Thanos's fellow councillors supported the idea.

FIRST BIRTHDAY BASH

Double Bay's Instyle Indulgence celebrated its first anniversary recently with a Hummerzine (a super-sized white Hummer) parked outside its boutique. Against a backdrop of cocktails and Swarovski crystals, owner Sharon Navra showed the latest designs for autumn/winter to her clients - one of whom just happens to own the Hummerzine.